I proudly bought my grandparents home in 2023 at 24 years old by myself, i've worked 3 jobs (58+ plus hours a week) for the last 3 years to afford my mortgage and bills, by the time i pay my mortgage,bills,taxes groceries i can't even afford to save for my future…you think increasing the rates in times like this is a great idea for who? you guys have to be out of your mind if you think this is okay when the prices of homes are through the roof, the price of groceries, home heating oil, taxes, gasoline, etc are ASTRONOMICAL….for the last few years we've had a public benefit fee to pay eversource for people who haven't paid there bills? how is making the working people who struggle to get by pay for that? make that make sense please.

Instead of passing additional costs along to customers, eversource should be prioritizing affordability, efficiency, responsible spending and finding ways to reduce expenses without reaching into the pockets of the hardworking people.
I strongly urge eversource to reconsider this proposal of increases and prioritize the people that depend on your services, electricity is not a luxury it's a necessity to keep homes running. There needs to be greater accountability.
ENOUGH IS ENOUGH.
Sincerely,
a hardworking single homeowner that just wants to get by without struggling
