You also can't expect 10-18% increases for those of us lucky to get a 1-2% raise to cover all of the increases referenced below. The math isn't mathing.

We cannot possibly bear the cost of one more increase on one more thing at the same time under the current state of affairs and increases in CT. I haven't even recovered from all the public benefits charges I paid largely for someone else. I'm a single income mother just trying to get by. With medical insurance, groceries, gas, taxes all having gone up every year for the last several years.... This may just put me out ability to live in a home with my children. You must give these considerations when trying to approve another Eversource increase. It's unfathomable at this time. There's not enough to go around and the electric rates for me have already increased by almost 1/3 since purchasing my home in 2020 with no changes other than getting NEWER windows and insulated shading. That was supposed to help. I depend on electric for heating. We currently keep the house at 64 just to survive and are miserable because of it.
