To Eversource Leadership,

I am writing to express my outrage and deep frustration over Eversource's continued rate increases and your latest request to charge customers even more for maintenance.

Year after year, our electric bills continue to climb. Our household electric bill is now approximately $800 a month. Let that sink in. An $800 monthly electric bill is an enormous burden for a family, and it is becoming increasingly difficult to justify the cost of living in Connecticut when basic necessities like electricity have become so expensive.

My question is simple: What have you been doing with the money collected from customers over the past nine years of increases? Why should customers be expected to pay more and more, only to be told that additional increases are needed to maintain the very infrastructure we have already been paying to support?

How much are Eversource's executives earning while Connecticut residents struggle to keep up with their utility bills? This is not a company asking customers to rescue a struggling operation. Customers deserve transparency and accountability for how their money is being spent and why another rate increase is necessary.

This issue also directly affects small businesses like ours. We own a small business in Connecticut that relies on refrigeration to operate. Electricity is not an optional expense for us; it is essential to keeping our business running. Every rate increase eats further into our margins and threatens our ability to remain profitable. Ultimately, businesses will be forced to raise prices, passing these costs along to already overburdened Connecticut consumers, or face the very real possibility of closing their doors.

Enough is enough. Connecticut residents and small businesses cannot continue to absorb endless increases while being given little reason to believe that the burden is being managed responsibly. We deserve affordable, reliable electricity, transparency about executive compensation and company spending, and a clear accounting of why previous rate increases have not been sufficient.

Before asking customers to pay another penny, Eversource should demonstrate exactly where the money from prior increases has gone, what steps have been taken to control costs, and why customers should be expected to shoulder yet another increase.

I urge Eversource leadership and Connecticut regulators to reject this request until these questions are answered and every reasonable effort has been made to protect consumers and small businesses.

Shame on Eversource for continuing to place this burden on the very people and businesses you are supposed to serve.

Sincerely,

A Frustrated Connecticut Resident and Small Business Owner
